Turin, January 7. N. S. The Count de Caſtlebarco, Envoy-Extraordinary from his Imperial Majeſty to this Court, returned two Days ago from Milan, where he had been for ſome time: And by his Maſter's Command he hath acquainted his Royal Highneſs with the Deſign of withdrawing the Pruſſian and Saxon Troops out of Italy, and that in a ſhort time the Emperor will replace them with the ſame number of his own Men. The Court of Vienna ſent Directions for thoſe Forces to march on the Twenty fifth of laſt Month, but they refuſed to obey, upon pretence that they have not received a ſufficient Gratification for their Winter Quarters, and that no Orders are yet come to them from their own Maſters. Lieutenant-General Schulembourg, who Commands at Suza, is arrived here, and ſeveral other Officers are expected in a few Days from Coni and Alexandria, to enjoy the Diverſions of the Carnival, ſince their Preſence at this time is not required at their Poſts. Yeſterday a Courier from Milan brought an Account of General Zumjungen's return from Vienna, with Orders to make the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for the enſuing Campaign.

Berlin, January 14. N. S. His Majeſty hath been pleaſed to appoint Monſieur Kameke, Great Maſter of the Wardrobe, to be Great Maſter of the Houſhold. This is a new created Employment, which entitles the Perſon that enjoys it to have precedence of all the Officers of the Crown. Some time ago the King ordered Ten Men out of each Troop in all his Regiments of Horſe to be ſent hither, and on the Ninth they were aſſembled at Spandau, and disbanded there, to the number of Six hundred. On Wedneſday laſt Monſieur Marſhall ſet out for Utrecht. His Majeſty hath named him to be his Ambaſſador to the Court of France as ſoon as the Peace is concluded; and at the ſame time he is to have the Title of Privy-Councellor of State, being at preſent only Privy-Councellor of War. Monſieur Bruce, General of the Muſcovite Forces, who had been kept here for ſome time by an Indiſpoſition, is gone to join the Army.

Hanover, January 17. N. S. Advices from Holſtein bring an Account, that after the burning of Altena, the Swedes withdrew to Pinnenberg, and from thence to Glueckſtad, and having drawn out the Troops which were in Garriſon in thoſe two Places, they went on to Itzehoe. Theſe Letters add, that the Czar was returned from Hamburgh to his Army in Holſtein, which was marching in conjunction with the Danes and Saxons to attack the Swedes, but it is thought the latter will retire under the Cannon of Toningen, upon the approach of their Enemies, whoſe Forces are ſaid to amount to Fifty five thouſand Men. The Confederate Generals have made great Complaints to Count Steinbock of the burning of Altena, repreſenting to him that they did not act after that manner in Pomerania, and deſiring to be informed what Reaſons induced him to it, that they may take their Meaſures accordingly: He anſwered at firſt, that it was done by way of Reprizal for the Danes having burnt the City of Staden, but as that happened during the Siege, he ſaid afterwards it was becauſe he could not carry off ſuch large Magazines as were in the Place, and that for the future he would not deſtroy any Town, if he was not forc'd to it by the like Practiſes of his Enemies. The King of Denmark is gone from Rensbourg to Fredericſtad.

Utrecht, January 24. N. S. On Wedneſday the 18th the Miniſters of the Proteſtant Allies met at the Lord Privy Seal's Houſe, and had a long Conference upon the Means which have been already uſed ſince the beginning of the Treaty of Peace for advancing the Intereſt of the Proteſtant Religion, as alſo upon what Steps are proper to be taken for that effect, in the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs. The ſame Afternoon the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries were in Conference with thoſe of France, and ſoon after with the Miniſters of his Imperial Majeſty, who ſeems at laſt diſpoſed to come into the Queen's Meaſures for procuring a general Peace:
